

Paulo Roberto de Lima Lopes

Chief of Telemedicine Division at Universidade Federal de Sao Paulo (UNIFESP). Serving at UNIFESP, Lopes coordinate the telemedicine researches and development team. He has participated in national telemedicine projects and programs, also in departmental telemedicine projects. He has also been teaching Telemedicine for undergraduate and graduate course as Assistant Professor at Department of Health Informatics. He is an active researcher and he conducts consulting projects on the fields of Information and Communication Technology for Healthcare. His research interest regards the new digital technologies applied to medical practices and e-health innovation and businesses. Lopes received his Electronic Engineering Degree from Faculdade de Engenharia Industrial (FEI). He completed a Master of Science in Nuclear Engineering (with honors) at Instituto de Pesquisas Energéticas e Nucleares (IPEN) and Universidade de Sao Paulo (USP). Nowadays he is a doctoral candidate in Health Informatics at Universidade Federal de Sao Paulo (UNIFESP) under the supervision of Professor Daniel Sigulem. His experience includes the following areas: Electronic Patient Records, Videoconference Systems, Hardware, Software, Equipment and Human Resources Management for Telemedicine, Standards and Evaluation Methods in Health Informatics. He has articles presented at conferences and published in proceedings of the Brazilian Telemedicine and Telehealth Council, Brazilian Health Informatics Association, and several others National and International Journals and chapter in books. He is member of Commit of Telemedicine University Network and Permanent Commit of Telehealth of Ministry of Health, in Brazil.