

Dr. Young Sung Lee, M.D. Ph.D. has been leading MedRIC (Medical Research Information Center), a Ministry of Education, Science and Technology funded organization in S. Korea, focusing on research and development in medical informatics, medical data visualization, telematics, Virtual Reality-based medical training, and health communication and promotion policies and programs. Dr. Lee is Professor of College of Medicine at Chungbuk National University and a visiting scholar at Stanford University Medical Media and Information Technology. He has led many global health literacy initiatives covering diseases such as AIDS, Avian Influenza, cancer series (e.g., lung, colon, and breast cancer), and other diseases such as pneumonia, malaria, tsutsugamushi fever, haemorrhagic fever, and leptospirosis). He is currently serving as a board member of the Korean Society of Medical Informatics. He is also a member of Committee on Cutting-edge Converging and Interdisciplinary Technologies (CCCIT), National Science and Technology Council, the Nation's highest decision making body on science and technology policies.

Mobile phone: +82 10 5492 2869

Email: yslee@chungbuk.ac.kr